1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

3. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

4. Claims 1-3, 5-8, 10-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Karinkanta (3964872).

Karinkanta teaches a device and method for extraction followed by gas analysis. A tube coated on the inside with an adsorption layer, such as porous silica gel, is exposed to a sample to extract components, sample solvent is evaporated, and the tube is inserted in a furnace and the components desorbed and passed to a gas chromatograph (col. 1, lines 51-66, col. 2, lines 29-39, col. 4, lines 2-29). It is the examiner's position that the glass or quartz tubes taught inherently have smooth interiors.

5. Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Karinkanta as applied to claims above.

Karinkanta fails to teach connecting the tube to a vessel containing the sample and then removing the vessel.

It would have been obvious to inject sample into the tube by connecting, e.g. a pipette or syringe to the tube to inject a sample and then removing the pipette or syringe after injection as was known in the art. Note that in this case, the connection is by, e.g., insertion in the tube.

6. Claims 9, 12 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Karinkanta as applied to claims above, and further in view of Kovar (5882939).

Karinkanta fails to teach an irregular interior to the tube.

Kovar teaches that TLC substrates, such as those used in Karinkanta can be made with roughened surfaces as an alternative to the traditional glass material (bridge col. 2-3).

It would have been obvious to make the tube of Karinkanta with an irregular (roughened) surface as a known alternative to glass as taught by Kovar. Although Kovar does not teach the purpose of such roughening, one of ordinary skill would understand that roughening may, e.g., enhance adherence of sorbent.
